EDITORIAL

Since the outbreak of armed conflict on April 15, 2023, Sudan has been experiencing one of the worst humanitarian crises in the world. Over 11 million people have been displaced, and nearly half of the population requires urgent humanitarian aid. With the international response struggling to meet these needs, local initiatives such as emergency rooms have emerged, providing medical care and humanitarian services to affected communities.

Emergency rooms across Sudan have worked tirelessly to alleviate the effects of war by distributing humanitarian aid, including water, food, medicine, shelter, and evacuation services. These services continue despite complex security conditions, which have led to the deaths of many volunteers. May they rest in peace. These challenges, including fatalities, injuries, and arrests, have not deterred the emergency rooms or weakened the resolve of the volunteers. Instead, they have strengthened their determination to work day and night. As a result, emergency rooms have gained a strong reputation, even on the international stage, and have been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for the second consecutive time in early 2025.

With the efforts of its members, the emergency rooms have developed their structures and cadres. For example, on December 30, 2024, the Youth Emergency Room in Kassala celebrated the first anniversary of its General Assembly, marking the end of the previous executive office's term and the beginning of a new office with promising young members.

On January 15-16, 2025, 113 emergency rooms in East Darfur held the founding conference for the State Coordination Council for Emergency Rooms, with 40 representatives from nine localities attending.

From January 28-31, 2025, the emergency rooms of West Kordofan organized the Humanitarian Issues and Grassroots Building Conference in Al-Muglad. The conference resulted in significant recommendations and decisions, which are detailed in this issue.

On Friday, February 28, 2025, as we release the third issue of Echoes of Solidarity, the Bahri Emergency Room announced in a statement that it would hold its General Assembly meeting on this date. This reflects its commitment to institutional and organized work, ensuring its continued effective role in providing humanitarian and service support to the residents of Bahri.

Emergency rooms have adopted raising awareness as a core mission. These grassroots conferences and general assemblies serve as a mirror reflecting the deep understanding and awareness of young emergency room members regarding their goals and vision for the future.

Unfortunately, these efforts are threatened by several factors, chief among them the protection of volunteers. Targeting volunteers has become a recurring issue due to the ongoing war, societal divisions, and the spread of racist rhetoric. Additionally, the reduction in humanitarian aid has forced many emergency rooms to cease operations. This situation is further complicated by the impact of new U.S. administration policies on the future of emergency rooms in Sudan. The East Nile Emergency Room in Khartoum State recently warned of an imminent humanitarian catastrophe, including a severe food crisis and widespread famine.

The integration of international efforts with local community and emergency room initiatives is essential to ending the war. Even if these efforts fail to achieve that goal, they should at least work towards mitigating the war's effects by continuing—rather than halting or reducing—humanitarian support, including water, food, and medicine.

West Kordofan State Emergency Rooms Humanitarian Issues and Base Building Conference

Muglad City from January 28 to 31, 2025

Final Statement

We, the emergency rooms of West Kordofan State, believe in our pioneering role that we have initiated since the outbreak of the April 15 war in providing relief to our people and healing their wounds.

In line with our principles of transparency and tightening the democratic determinants and the grassroots structure that supports these principles.

In order to reinforce the voluntary civilian role, and to emphasize the roles played by the December revolutionaries in the change and the hope of our grieving people that they will insist on biting the roots of this revolution.

After transparent and democratic deliberations in which one hundred participants representing eleven localities participated, which aimed to complete the structural structure of the chambers and discuss their future role, and to develop an integrated conceptualization of the urgent, medium and long-term needs of humanitarian aid, we reached the following decisions and recommendations:

First: Resolutions:

Adopt this conference as the founding conference of the Emergency and Construction Chambers - West Kordofan.

2. Completing the institutional structure of the emergency rooms in West Kordofan State by a democratic and consensual process.

Electing a state coordinator and a representative in the Grassroots Action Coordination Council.

Electing the state council from the localities.

Election of state working committees from the localities represented in reports, programs, and finances.

Electing the decisions of the women's chambers of the localities.

Approval of the statute of the Emergency and Construction Chambers - West Kordofan

The conference adopted the recommendation to expand the tasks of the emergency rooms and by virtue of the roles agreed upon by the conferees to include the role of participation in reconstruction and reconstruction, and therefore the conferees decided to amend the name of the emergency rooms in West Kordofan State to: Emergency and Construction Chambers in West Kordofan State, in line with the roles they have assumed and in anticipation of their future role in the peacebuilding and reconstruction process.

Forming technical committees to formulate strategic plans and executive programs to translate the agreed recommendations and submit them to the supporting and funding bodies and seek community support for this purpose.

Second: Recommendations

Food Sector:

Continue the current approach of delivering food through financial transfers to emergency rooms, allowing them to handle the purchase and distribution of food supplies. Work on attracting in-kind assistance through land and air crossings via the sister country, South Sudan. Assist in utilizing all locally available resources to support displaced persons (temporary building materials and available food supplies) to stimulate the local economy, expand job opportunities for the host community, and provide food for displaced communities.

In this regard, we recommend adopting simple technologies (tuk-tuks, solar energy, home production tools) by displaced families and engaging emergency room members in training programs designed and funded by relevant funding entities.

All these efforts require emergency rooms to adopt the role of peace incubators, not only to address the effects of displacement but also to contribute to restoring the social fabric, which has been torn apart due to inherited conflicts.

Emphasize the local heritage of conflict resolution (Joudiya).

This goal necessarily requires elevating the role of emergency rooms from the phase of rapid response to mitigating negative impacts and recovery.

Education Sector:

The necessity of supporting local efforts working to ensure the continuity of the educational process and drawing inspiration from the experiences of some localities in this regard, particularly concerning condensed curricula and other means for this purpose, in accordance with a comprehensive strategic plan.

The necessity of rehabilitating the educational infrastructure and participating in this through emergency rooms.

Reintroducing vocational education programs to meet immediate objectives by providing skilled labor among displaced and host communities to achieve multiple goals, including improving the economic and social conditions of displaced persons. These programs must align with strategic objectives.

The necessity of direct intervention to support education through financial assistance (paying teachers' salaries, providing food, healthcare, and shelter for them and displaced persons).

The necessity of finding a solution to the legitimacy issue of the educational process in areas controlled by the Rapid Support Forces. In this regard, we recommend considering the adoption of educational curricula from neighboring countries and signing agreements with them. We also recommend studying models of educational application in disputed areas with special administrative protocols (Abyei, and the Two Areas: South Kordofan and Blue Nile).

Health Sector:

Provide necessary statistics and cooperate with relevant authorities in this regard.

The necessity of providing urgent primary healthcare needs for displaced persons (child nutrition, IV fluids, maternal health).

The necessity of emergency rooms contributing to efforts to provide the main health sector requirements, including infrastructure (facilities, equipment, mobile clinics) and human resources (staff and administrative units), by securing funding and participating in reconstruction efforts.

Utilizing midwives to improve maternal health and health officers to improve environmental health.

Ensuring the smooth flow of medical supply chains (utilizing medical supply units).

The necessity of developing short-, medium-, and long-term plans to achieve these aspirations.

The necessity of working and coordinating with relevant authorities to ensure the protection of all these activities.

Women's Issues Sector:

We all know the violence and violations that women have endured during this war, in addition to the burden of managing many households due to the loss of their breadwinners. This has created tragic conditions for most women in our country. Based on this, providing psychological support to women in these circumstances is a top priority. In this regard, the role of emergency rooms is crucial in securing aid and contributing to rehabilitation programs.

The necessity of engaging in efforts to secure and distribute aid for women's health and special needs.

Contributing to and participating in efforts aimed at providing livelihood opportunities for women to support them economically and socially.

Contributing to the formation of women's protection networks.

We recommend designing psychological support programs to help modify some children's behaviors affected by the war.

Shelter Sector:

Emergency rooms must engage in efforts to provide safe shelters equipped with standard requirements, by coordinating with all entities that can assist in this matter (adequate housing, clean water, and standard toilets).

These efforts include identifying safe areas, which may include the demilitarized zone north of Line 10.

The necessity of implementing all measures to protect the environment, preserve natural resources, and ensure they are not polluted. This requires providing alternative energy sources for cooking and lighting purposes.

Grassroots Building Sector:

Strengthen coordination between emergency rooms, local and international humanitarian organizations, and relevant entities.

Establish digital platforms to exchange information on urgent needs.

Empower local communities through training programs in crisis management and relief efforts, expanding the role of emergency rooms to include reconstruction and rebuilding phases.

We recommend engaging emergency room members in capacity-building programs.

We recommend media coordination between grassroots emergency rooms across the state's localities.

We recommend providing information technology and communication tools, as well as multimedia resources, for grassroots emergency rooms.

We recommend establishing grassroots emergency rooms dedicated to people with special needs.

At the Top of the List: Sudan's Emergency Rooms Nominated for the 2025 Nobel Peace Prize for the Second Time

The Director of the Oslo Research Center, Mr. Henrik Urdal, announced the list of nominees for the 2025 Nobel Peace Prize, with Sudan's emergency rooms at the forefront. The list also includes:

Sheikh Mohammed bin Abdulrahman Al Thani, Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Qatar

The Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe

The Carter Center

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom

The International Court of Justice and the International Criminal Court

Commenting on the nominations, Urdal stated: «The emergency response rooms in Sudan are a powerful testament to the strength of local resilience and collective action in the face of brutal war.» He emphasized that their work, alongside the efforts of institutions, diplomats, and peace advocates, highlights the interconnectedness of various efforts to promote justice and peace.

It is noteworthy that in October 2024, Sudan's emergency rooms were also among the nominees for the previous year's Nobel Prize, which was awarded to the Japanese organization Nihon Hidankyo.

Observers believe that awarding the Nobel Peace Prize to such humanitarian initiatives, which operate under extremely dangerous security conditions, would shed light on the vital role that local communities play in delivering life-saving aid during conflicts.

Since the outbreak of armed conflict in April 2023, Sudan has been experiencing one of the world's worst humanitarian crises, with over 11 million people displaced and nearly half of the population in urgent need of assistance.

With the international response failing to meet these needs, local initiatives such as emergency rooms have emerged, providing medical care and humanitarian services to affected communities.
